Fourteen Rules Relating to Base-Ball Playing.

information Which Will Be Appreciated by Young Men as Well as Boys— Regulations Governing the Field, the Balls and the Bats.

Mr. Stackhouse, in the New York Tribune "Book of Open Air Sports," tells how the grown up folks play ball; and we have an idea that the rules relating to the laying out of grounds will be very interesting reading of grounds will be very interesting reading to more than one of "our young folks." It may seem a long way round home to the little legs that carry our readers between bases; and very possibly the throw from third to first may be out of all proportion to the amount of muscle that can be brought to bear upon the feat. Any way, here are the figures, and if they look too long and far between just now, why, save them, and you'll surely grow up to them one of these days:

Rule I.—The ground must be an inclosed Rule 1.—The ground must be an inclosed ield, sufficient in size to enable each player to play in his position as required by these Rule 2.—The infield must be a space of ground thirty yards square. Rule 3.—the bases must be-

(1) Four in number, and designated as first base, second base, third base and home (2) The home base must be of white rubber or white stone, twelve inches square, so fixed in the ground as to be even with the surface and so placed in the corners of the infi ld that two of its sides will form part of the boundaries of said infield.

(3) The first, second and third bases must be canvas bags, fifteen inches square, painted white, and filled with some soft material, and so placed that the center of each shall be upon a separate corner of the infield, the first base at the right, the second base opposite, and the third base at the left of the home base. (4) All the bases must be securely fast-ned in their position and so placed as to be seen distinctly by the umpire.

Rule 4.—The foul lines must be drawn in straight lines from the outer corner of the home base, through the center of the posi-tions of first and third bases, to the boundaries of the ground.

Rule 5.-The pitcher's lines must be straight lines forming the boundaries of a space of ground, in the infield, seven feet long by four feet wide, distant fifty feet from the center of the home base and so placed that the six-feet lines would each be two feet distant from and parallel with a straight line passing through the center of the home and second bases. Each corner of this space must be marked by a flat iron plate or stone, six inches square, fixed in the ground even with the surface.

Rule 6.—The catcher's lines must be drawn from the outer corner of the home base, in continuation of the foul lines, straight to the limits of the ground back of the home base. Rule 7.—The captain's lines must be drawn from the catcher's lines to the limits of the ground, fifteen feet from and parallel with the foul lines. Rule 8.—The player's lines must be drawn from the catcher's lines to the limits of the ground, fifty feet from and parallel with the foul lines.

Rule 9.—The player's benches must be furnished by the home club, and placed upon a portion of the ground outside the player's lines. They must be twelve feet in length, and immovably fastened to the ground. At the end of each bench must be immovably fixed a bat-rack, with fixture lding twenty bats; one such rack must be designated for the exclusive use of the visiting club, and the other for the exclusive use of the home club.

Rule 10.—The batsman's lines must be straight lines forming the boundaries of a space on the right, and of a similar space on the left of the home base, six feet long by three wide, extending three feet in front of and three feet behind the center of the home base, with its nearest line distant one foot from the home base.

Rule 11.—The three feet lines must be drawn as follows: From a point on the foul line from home base to first base, and equal-ly distant from such bases, shall be drawn a line on foul ground, at a right angle to said foul line, and to a point three feet distant from it; thence running parallel with said foul line to a point three feet distant from the center of the first base; thence in a straight line to the center of the first base, and thence upon the foul line to the place of beginning.

Rule 12.—The lines designated in rules 4 Rule 12.—The lines designated in rules 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10 and 11, must be marked with chalk or other suitable material, so as to be distinctly seen by the umpire. They must all be so marked their entire length, except the captain's and player's lines, which must be so marked for a distance of at least thirty-five yards from the catcher's lines, or to the limits of the grounds.

Rule 13.—The ball must not weigh less than five nor more than five and one-quarter ounces avoirdupois, and measure not less than nine nor more than nine and one-quarter inches in circumference. It must be ter inches in circumference. It must be composed of woolen yarn, and contain not more than one ounce of vulcanized rubber in mold form, and be covered with leather. It must be furnished by the secretary of the league, whose seal shall be final evidence of the league o reague, whose seal shall be mad evidence of the legality of the ball.

(4) Should the ball be knocked outside of the inclosure or lost during the game the umpire shall at once call for another ball.

Rule 14.—The bat must be made wholly of wood, except that the handle may be wound with twine, or a granulated substance applied, not to exceed eighteen inches from the end.

The Phrase "Home Rule."

Mr. E. S. Brandreth, one of the sub-editors of the New English Dictionary, has been at great pains to find the answer to this question. The result of his researches is to show that the phrase "Home Rule" was first used by the late Mr. A. M. Sullivan in the Nation of July 28, 1880. It did not come into general use, however, until ten years later, when the Irish Protestants, disgusted with Mr. Gladstone's Disestablishment measure, founded "The Home Government Association for Ireland." The movement was taken up by the antilandiori party, who revived Mr. Sullivan's neat phrase and made it their watchword.

THE TERRIBLE TEREDO. A Marine Worm That Destroys Timber and Sinks Large Ships.

A study of the history and habits of this singular worm will be found neither uninteresting nor unprofitable, says the Atlanta Constitution. Its habitat was originally in the tropic seas, but being carried in the timbers of vessels into North American and European waters, it has become the terror and dread of wharfmen and esptains of unsheathed sailing craft along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, and in the harbors of numbers of Mediterranean cities. According to the classification of Linnæus, this bivalve belongs to the family of Pholadide and genus teredo, so called from their habit of destroying ship or other timber. The shell is equally valved, and in form it is short, thick and round and widely open in front and rear. This shell is situated at the inner end of a tube, somewhat cylindrical in shape, and either straight or crooked, as the case may be; this tube being open at each end in the full-grown specimers, and lined or coated with a white, chalky paste or substance, which seems to be its digest-ive apparatus. The weapon of the teredo is not its teeth, as might be supposed. This singular animal has still another peculiar-ity, dependent, however, upon the one last mentioned for since its instrument is its foot, so it feeds itself not from the mouth, toot, so it feeds itself not from the mouth, but from the foot itself. The valves above noted are simply appendages of the foot. In fact, if a teredo should have his foot amputated he would in a most vital sense "lose his grip." In the center of the circular opening of the valves the foot is protruded, like the blade concealed in a spring case, and the evites agreement. spring cane, and the entire arrangement constitutes a boxing-machine of power inconceivable in so small an object. But the strength of this machine becomes apparent when, upon a closer examination, one notes the strong, rubber-like ridges of the valves which can contract with great force, and the comparatively immense size of the great abductor muscle which enables the teredo to use his sharp foot with the ease of an auger passing through the softest This worm attains often a great length but it is usually from one foot to a yard long, its size depending on the length of time it has been in the wood, and frequent ly on the size of the wood itself. It is pro vided with two respiratory tubes, each of which has a syphon attached to a calcareous, flattened, triangular plate on the outside of the body. It has two heads, if such they can be called, attached to the extremity of a tube much smaller than the main trunk, and which are each (the small tubes) about six inches long; or, in other words, the main body splits into two small tubes at about a foot or six inches from where the head is in a teredo, and where the tail would be in a snake. This worm is oviparious, and when the young are born (with a smooth shell) they swim around by means of a vibratile cilia; sometimes creeping with the foot until old enough to begin work on a piece of wood. A good, fasten themselves to the wood by means of the suction apparatus in their heads, strike in with their foot and here inwardly until only the head remains outside. Then they fasten themselves to the very edge, just a a clerk will fasten sheets of paper together, turning over the sides of a brass clamp, and, henceforward, their sole aim, object and ambition in life is to grow, bore and make sawdust. Small when they enter, they could no more creep backward out of their original hole after feasting a month or two on a rich pine log than a camel could go through the eve of a needle. Still another species of this log-eater is the worm classified by Leach, Limnoria terebrons, genus Isopoda, which is a minute sessile, eyed crustacean, and which eats into the piles several feet below the low water mark; and in vast numbers. But in destructive power these latter can not equal tacked by the teredo, and one channel, be-ginning almost as small as the diameter of a knitting needle, gradually widened downward in a tortuous course until, at an aperture on the opposite side of the log (which ad been gnawed lengthways,) the the passage had grown to quite an inch in width, and the worm had grown in length seven and eight inches, as nearly as could be measured On the coast of California, I am credibly informed the teredo sometimes attains a diameter of two inches and a length of fifteen feet. And, so far as any one knows their only food seems to be the dust which they create rasping their way through the logs. This dust is deposited by the foot in the tube lined with the chalky membrane, and instead of crawling inward and onward as their burrowings lengthen, they simply grow in due proportion, their head remaining it its place. But there they find their punishment; for their size thus increased and their log once consumed and broken off. and their log once consumed and broken off, they fall out into the water, and their career ends in the maw of the next hungry fish that chances their way. Once their one log is destoyed they can never begin life again. So the wise teredo is careful to select a good, big log to begin with.

Another trait of this worm is that it will never attack floating timber. But woe to the ship riding at anchor if her timbers are not protected by metal sheetings. Many a noble vessel has been lost with all on board in mid ocean owing to the insidious ravages nade by the worm as she lay quietly in port taking on cargo and passengers. But as it rarely happens that there is not some visible ble compensation in nature's works and creatures, to even the teredo prove needful by boring into and disintegrating the sunken wrecks, timbers and other obstructions which would else render navigation in some harbors dangerous. It is astonishing how rapidly a wreck will disappear in some channels particularly infested by the teredo.

How to prevent them from ruining a pile almost as soon as it was put down was long a yexed question with men in maritime a yexed question with men in maritime towns; but experiments and invention have solved this matter as they have given the solution of many others. The logs are now kyanized or creosoted. A log properly treated will have a life of at least fifty years, and may bid defiance to every teredo that ever bored a hole or who would wish to hore one.

The Quarterly Review admits that Lord Beaconsfield was "deficient in a knowledge of foreign languages." I should think he was! I suppose the reviewer never heard the story about him which still lingers among the waiters at the Kaiserhof. During the Berlin Congress he was breakfasting alone one morning, and he rang the bell. He knew not a word of German, but he had a sort of smattering of French. So it was in that language that he asked, or imagined he had asked, the waiter to bring him a footstool. Some time elapsed; there was much disputatious whispering among the waiters in the corridors outside. At length there entered waiter No. 1, bearing ceremonially a footbath, followed by waiter No. 2 carrying towels.

Kept a Thief in Office.

Some of the Democratic press FEDERAL are pointing to the case of Herbert F. Beecher, who is charged with stealing at Port Townsend, as a case where President Cleveland made a fearful mistake in appointing one not a genuine Democrat to office. It was a grave mistake, surely, but Mr. Cleveland had no- [ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCHES TO THE tice enough in advance that it would be an appointment of doubtful good. Of course he felt under very great obligations to Henry Ward Beecher. The Salt Lake Tribune says the erratic minservice for the country as a Republican, followed the malcontents of New York off into Mugwumpism. By nature he was a freetrader, and there have been very serious hints that he accepted direct and substantial favors from the Cobden Club. Be that as it may, he, as a Mugwump, performed telling service for Mr. Cleveland and his party in 1884. Aside from that, he performed a particular service for Mr. Cleveland when the moral life of that gentleman was assailed. In gratitude President Cleveland appointed Herbert F. Beecher Collector at Port Town. send. But the young man's reputation was so bad then that the and Wisconsin, forming the Spring Senate Committee unanimously recommended that the nomination be rejected, and it was. Despite that rejection and in the face of the young man's record, which was published by the Eastern press, Mr. Cleveland, with that obstinacy which is one of his strongest traits, appointed him eight to twenty, and in the southern portion from twenty and in the southern press. the young man's record, which Special Treasury Agent at Port Townsend, an office which requires no confirmation by the Senate. It seems he began stealing shortly after he went into office, and has since continued in the same line. And though the evidence of his rascality has been accumulating for years, President Cleveland would never dismiss him. It is a case which is a reminder that gratitude never ought to go so far as to give a thief an office and hold him there after a reputation for new stealing has been fastened upon the incumbent.

NEW BRITON, Conn., April 27.-C. E. Woodruff, formerly Secretary of the Young Men's Republican Club and ister who had done such splendid City Clerk, has confessed that he uttered forged papers to the extent of $40,000. His victims are banks. He has practiced forgery six years, according to his own confessions, during which time he has forged notes to the extent of $500,000. Of this amount he managed without being discovered to make good all but the above mentioned amount. Nearly all the forgeries were in the shape of indorsements on Wood-ruff's note. As fast as one note be-came due he issued another, and forged the indorsement to take it up. In October, 1887, he had out over $100,000 in forged notes. From that time until the present he uttered, according to his own admission, nearly $400,000 on bogus notes and checks.

THE COLONY RANCH TRAGEDY.

The Harney county (Oregon) Herald gives the following particulars of the tragedy, which resulted in the murder of Cooper and Suicide of Jones at Colony ranch:

"At the Colony, a place about 14 miles from John Catlow's and about 16 from the State line, two of the boys on the horse rodeo now in progress in that section-R. D. Cooper, a white, one of French's ranch men, and Ben Jones, a half-breed, one of the Sisson ranch's men-are said to have had a fight, in which Cooper came out best man, he having thrown Jones back over the bed and choked him till he cried enough.

Shortly afterward Cooper went to the creek to wash and Jones went into Avery, a well-known local prize- the house for the same purpose. As fighter, fell dead at an early hour this | Cooper came towards the house Jones rushed out apon him with the knife; Cooper started to run around the house, and while the boys expected to see Cooper appear round the corner, they heard a struggle behind the house, and ran around in time to see Cooper down and Jones on him, but too late to render assistance. Jones was seized at once, but Cooper spoke only a few words and expired. A later report says he was borne 2½ miles to the house of Mr. Denio, within 6 miles of the Nevada State line, where he disposed of his personal effects before

> Examination showed Cooper to have been stabbed six or seven times—several gashes in the head, one long five to six inch slash down through muscles of the left arm, and the fatal blow under the same arm in towards the heart. Friday morning Jones was put on horse and taken to where the body of Cooper was being prepared for burial by Mike Finn, one of Catlow's foremen. A man named Ward, the only other armed man of the crowd, was in the house with him. Finn's overcoat was lying on a bed, and while he was was lying on a bed, and while he was arranging the body Jones slipped a pistol out of the pocket and walked out doors. Finn followed, when Jones drew the weapon on him and said "I am going away!" He told Finn to tell Ward to come out of the house. Ward appeared in the door covering him with a pistol and ordering him to drop his pistol.

Ward replied "Get in, if you've got sand enough!" when Jones lowered his pistol, got down on his knees, placed the weapon to his right temple, ranging upward, and blew off the top of his head.

This suicide was committed in the presence of nine witnesses, two of whom were Messrs. Catlow and Denio,

Both bodies were buried on Saturday. The officials were notified of the suicide and interment on the road Sunday noon, and to save the county further expense they returned to Har-

R. D. Cooper was about 40 years old, had no family, and has worked on the Peter French ranch three or four years, and was generally liked among the boys.

Jones is a half-breed and came in only a short time ago from California, and was working in the same crowd with Cooper for Wm. Sisson. He is said to have left a written document disposing of his belongings.

LOVELOCK NEWS.

An Interesting Letter From Prosperous Section.

LOVELOCK'S, April 25, 1889. EDITOR GAZETTE: The whole country hereabouts is very dry, and stock in the hills are said to be suffering. Water for irrigating purposes in the valleys is scarce, and every day lends fears that the worst is to come, and what the result may be is plainly foreseen should another month pass without rain. In the hills FEED IS ALSO SCARCK,

Except on the very high points, but, while horses by their more speedy qualities may and do fall in on the

the slower hoofs.

A few hours' rain in the hills would be a blessing—in fact, the salvation of rain prospects—but every day rolls around with the heat from the sun increasing. The grass grows less with the water, with the proverbial fact that all signs fail in dry seasons. People traveling across the country are told, in looking upon the country gentold, in looking upon the country generally, that upon several occasions it was all covered by a great lake, and it is in the memory of many pioneers when the waters of the Carson and the Humboldt mingled at their respective sinks. To do this now, a depth of water, even below White Plains, would simply be enormous, and leves would have to be con-

this state of affairs will never again exist. With a sufficiency of water for irrigating, there is NO FINER LANDS

For crops, nor would there be a more beautiful section of country on God's footstool than the same valley of Lovelock. The soil is both deep and rich, and, even now, without a drop of water it helps none. That there are two sides to the water question is apparent to all, but how to attain more is the point to be solved.

THE MARZEN WELL. A great deal has been said of Joe Marzen's enterprise, in the digging of the same song of praise. A purer medicin an immense well at his place, and by means of a centrifugal pump raising water to the surface, but as his well is principally in size, not depth, and being situated some seven lower than a large slough now half full of water, and the ground between being full of water by reason of seepage it is apparent that the well supply is only a limited or surface proposition, and unless a subterranean flow is encountered little good will come of it. Joe is a stayer though and he is daily expecting drilling machinery, when he will put down a dozen or more, if necessary, of six-inch wells, which may solve the problem. For stock may solve the problem. For stock purposes, many are now sinking wells and erecting windmills to do the pumping, a Reno man having sold a half dozen Cyclones this week for such purposes and more to follow.

The Crop Prospects.

The outlook for a good first crop of hay on the meadows is very encouraging, and a fine second crop is looked higher line, it is too far from water for for, and in some localities a good third for, and in some localities a good third crop will be harvested. There will be plenty of water in the river for every-body until after the first cutting, when there will be a short supply unless frequent rains come.

A Pleasant Entertainment. The anniversary celebration given at the Nevada Theater last evening by the Odd Fellows of Reno was more than a success in every respect, and the supper at the Arcade Restaurant is said to have been fine.

An Unhappy Home.

"I wish my wife would get well or Something," said a husband who had been sorely tried with an invalid wife. It seems a heartless speech byt who can tell the discomforts of a home where the wife is always sick. Poor food, crying children! No wonder the man grows desperate. But if he would get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the wife, he would find that the sunshine would return to his home. "Favorite Prescription!" and levees would have to be con-structed to keep the waters from the doors of hundreds of houses dotting the valley, but it is safe to reason that find that the sunshine would return to his home. "Favorite Prescription" is a posative cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhea, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, prolapsus or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," antroversion, and r-troversion, "bearing down" sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb, inflammation, pain and tenderness of overies, accompanied with "internal heat."

and, even now, without a drop of water having been in the ditches for two seasons, the alfalfa crop is very fine—really superior to the average in Washoe county—and not at all discouraging for a fair second crop.

The whole cause for these people—the oldest locaters of water rights in the State—being cut off from their rights is the fact of the Humboldt having been dammed above by more recent settlers, until not a drop of water is allowed to reach a point from 10 to 20 miles above. It is not that there is no water in the Humboldt as many affirm, but because the more powerful moneyed men have gone a hundred miles up the river and built dams, thus not only cutting off their less fortunate neighbors, but actually turning the river into the desert, where it helps none. That there are two it helps none. That there are two it helps none. That there are two it helps none.

AN ELOPEMENT FOILED;

The Course of True Love Inter-rupted by a Telegram—What the Intended Bridegroom Has to Say. Miss Cute Perkins, daughter of J. R.

Perkins of Greenville, Plumas county, Cal, a charming young fady of 17 Summers, got it into her head that she wanted to marry, and, in company with Jesse C. Doss, arranged a flight from the parental roof that had sheltered her for life. Last night's N. & C. train brought the happy couple south as far as Reno, where they were met by a well-known citizen, who informed the young lady that he had a telegram from her father requesting him to arrest the fleeing couple, on the ground that the girl was under age. This bit of information was hard for her to bear, but she saw no other way out of the difficulty, and, as the course of true love never runs smooth she accepted. love never runs smooth, she accepted the situation good-naturedly and ac-companied her benefactor to his home. The young man, who felt inclined to eat humble pie, has telegraphed the eat humble pie, has telegraphed the stern parent for his consent to the union, but what his reply will be the GAZETTE can only guess.

Mr. Doss is registered at the Riverside and tells the following story in with the elopement: "I side and tells the following story in connection with the elopement: "I endeavored to get the consent of the girl's parents, but did not succeed and she made the proposition to run away, which I consented to, and Thursday night, at 10 o'clock, we left and went-to Susanville, where we remained until yesterday, when we took the stage for Reno and came in on last night's train, and I was informed that the girl could accompany me no furnight's train, and I was informed that the girl could accompany me no further, so I telegraphed the old man for his consent; if it don't come I will have her in spite of h.—!" and here he showed by the white of his eyes that he meant what he said. From the wording of the dispatch it seems that Mr. Perkins is not altogether irregulable to the magnitude of the ma concilable to the marriage, but of course this the young man don't know. The dispatch read: "Keep them from going away if you can; if not, have them marry." However, they are separated now, and a suit for kidnapping is not among the improba-bilities if the matter is pressed.

Hon. S. C. Wright, the new Mint Superintendent to be, is being bored to death by applicants for positions, but he cannot give them all a place and the kicking that will be indulged in after the appointments have been made will be something awful to hear.
It will run something after this fashion: "What in sheol did he want to appoint that ______ for? He never controlled his own vote, to say nothing about any other. He was always in the market for $2 50, while always in the market for $2 50, while I've been a Republican for thirty years and spent my good money to help the party win loosing fights, now what do I get? I get soup—that's what I get; damn the party, I'll teach 'em how to throw me down. Just wait till the next election, and I'll show 'em.' But still the world will pursue the even tenor of its way and pursue the even tenor of its way, and we shall all be happy.

A Fortunate Druggist.

Mr. Edwin W. Joy for many years and now a prosperous druggist on the corner of Stockton and Market streets in San Francisco, probably never dreamed of rivaling in wealth the medicine kings of the country. But various rumore having been floating around to the effect that he has struck it big, an Examiner reporter was detailed to unearth the cause, and after much difficulty unraveled the following story:

dimently unraveled the following story:

It seems that about seven years ago an English physician, a great student of botany, located in this city. His practice was not extensive, and yet the few cases that came to him attracted no little attention. His success seemed to be in the treatment of liver and kidney disorders, and vitiated blood. In fact his ability to cope with these common complaints was marvelous. He seemed almost infallible, and his quiet modest methods and his well-kept secret was as much a mystery as himself. After his departure about a year later Mr. Joy determined to fathom the secret, and copying all the prescriptions he had filled for the erratic doctor. he began a systematic analysis. In his examination he discovered running all through the ination he discovered running all through the prescriptions for liver and kidney troubles, vitiated blood and stomach disorders a couple of vegetable extracts indigenous to California, so simple and so well known under homely every day na mes to every school boy as to entirely dissipate the suspicion that they were the active principles involved. So certain, however was Mr. Joy that he had discovered the secret, that he embodied the new elements in a preparation of Sawaparlia to discrete the in a preparation of Samaparilla to disg inste, and put it before his customers under the modest name of Joy's Vegetable Sarssparilla. Immediately the same marvelous stories came back of its astonishing effects, and the mystery was solved, and the talk it has created has already caused it to step into prominence, and orders pour in daily from all over the coast. And thus another California industry leaps into existence.—S. F. Examinor.

Another birthday dawns, and this, perhaps,
By earthly reckoning may be your last.

CARE OF THE SKIN.

An Instructive Lecture by a Philadelphia Physician.

Dr. H. W. Stelwagon delivered a lecture to the nurses of the Training School at the University Hospital recently. His subject was "Hygiene and Care of the Skin in Various Illnessess," and is reported by the Skinders of follows:

Philadelphia Ledyer as follows: "In order that you may more clearly un-derstand the necessity of the hygienic care of the skin in illness, a few remarks in regard to its construction and functions are essential. For practical purposes the skin may be considered as composed of three layers or parts: The outermost layer, or scarf skin; the middle layer, or true skin, and the innermost layer, which contains considerable fat, The scarf skin is the part which is being continually formed and cast off. If cleanliness is neglected this layer thickens somewhat, and prevents, to a certain extent, the physiological functions of the skin proper. It is this layer, or the outer part of it, which is acted upon by soap and water, being softened and removed, and a healthy action of the true skin thereby promoted. The middle skin, or the true skin, remains practically constant. The lowest layer, which may be for our purposes called the fat layer, disappears to a great extent in the course of a severe illness; and inin the course of a severe liness; and in-stead, then, of having the soft fatty tissue as a cushion between the hard internal structures, as the bones, etc., and outer ob-jects, as the bed or clothing, it disappears and the skin is pressed upon both from within and without, and, unless great care is exercised, there result tenderness, soreness and possibly ulceration—the so-called bed-sores. With this fat layer removed by discase, it will be seen how much greater importance attaches to the proper care and hygiene of the part of skin that is external.

The skin has also, in addition to its function as a general covering, other du-ties. It has, as you know, innumerable sweat and oil glands, as well as nerves and hairs. It exhales carbonic acid gas, water and other refuse products. Through the sweat glands as much as a pint or a pint and a half of water is thrown out in the course of twenty-four hours. This is double the quantity cast off by the lungs. Along with the water are carried off almost two per cent. of solid matter—matter for which the system has no further use. The sweat has another action, that is, the maintenance of a uniform temperature of the body by means of its evaporation. The amount of sweat secretion increases, therefore, with exercise, in order that increased internal temperature may be prevented. In this way it serves as a safety valve for the internal heat. The oil glands pour out an oily liquid invisible in ordinary circumstances, which serves to keep the skin soft, smooth and also to prevent a too rapid evaporation of the moisture of the body. The so-called pores of the skin are chiefly the openings of these sweat and oil glands. It will be readily seen, therefore, that the skin has an acthe four outlets or sewers of the body-the kidneys, intestinal canal and the lungs being the other three. These four outlets are to a small extent compensatory-that is, where one is more or less diseased the oth ers endeavor to make up the loss. It is of great importance, therefore, to maintain the skin in a condition to perform its functions health, but it is still of greater moment in health, but it is still of greater moment in diseases such as typhus, typhoid, scarlet fever and the like, which are due to zymotic or poisonous material. The skin, as well as every other outlet, is to be kept so as to lead to rapid elimination of the internal and burned-up tissues within. This brings us to a consideration of the different measures called for in fever or other filness in order that its healthy action may be promoted. The first of importance, as you have doubtless already inferred, is cleanliness. The pores, or outlets, of the glandular structures are to be kept open, and the scarf skin is not to be permitted to accumulate and harden, and thereby become more

"The question of washing or baths, therefore, demands attention. Unless otherwise fore, demands attention. Unless otherwise advised, washing or bathing in sickness is never to be omitted. Water sufficiently warm to prevent chilliness is to be employed. This means a temperature of ninety-two degrees to ninety-eight degrees, and, that there may be no mistake, always test with the theorements. Subsequently. test with the thermometer. Subsequently more hot or cold water may be added, according to the sensations of the patient. Water alone is not, however, sufficient to free the skin of its waste accumulation. Soap is necessary. Usually an ordinary toilet soap of good quality is satisfactory. In certain local and general skin diseases in which there is considerable crast or scale accumulation, a stronger scap is required. A familiar example of the stronger, or potash scaps, is the commercial soft scap. The use of scap requires, of course, a certain amount of fristion, and when the skin is sensitive or tender this is to be avoided; instead of scap, weak watery solutions of an stead of soap, weak watery solutions of an alkali, such as carbonate of sodium or borax, are employed. This is sponged on, and subsequently rinsed off with clean water. Although soap or an alkali is important as a cleansing agent, after this has been effected its further action on the skin would be irri-tating, and it is necessary, therefore, that take his case. He asked me why, and I said I would rather not auswer. But he insisted, saying that he had come two hundred mites to see me and wanted my opinion, whatever it was. So I told him plumply that his cancer was too far advanced to yield to the eruptive fevers, as small-pox, scarlet fever, etc., soothing baths are demanded for the relief of distressing symptoms, such as tension, burning or itchiness of the skin. The bran bath or gelatin both is, therefore, often brought into use. For cleaniness, exposed parts of the body, as the face and hands, should be washed not less than once daily. The same may be said of those parts where the sweat and oil glands are most numerous, as, for instance, the armpits. The scalp, also, should receive attention. The hair in the female should be plaited early in the illness so as to avoid tangling and dirt accumulation.

"In various diseases it is sometimes necessary to use dusting powders. These powders are often used; indeed, in many case ders are often used; indeed, in many cases after simple washing, giving the skin a soft and pleasant feeling exceedingly comfortable for the patient. Powders are soothing and protective. A powder for this purpose should be perfectly smooth and free from grit when rubbed between the fingers. Grittiness or lumpiness makes a fingers. Grittiness or lumpiness makes a powder useless, as instead of soothing or protecting the skin, irritation or scratching may result. Powders may be applied by the ordinary toilet powder brush, or it may be inclosed in a coarsely woven mustin or linen bag, and the surface gently tapped with it. At times, also, us in chains general itching or burning of the skin in the eruptive fevers, washes or lotions are advised—for instance a wash for antisentic vised—for instance, a wash for antiseptic purposes. The simple washes, or more plainly speaking, those washes containing no sediment, may be applied with an atom-izer, or with a sponge or piece of absorbent cotton. The sponge is usually to be avoid-ed; it is difficult to keep clean and free from septic or poisonous matter, and too expensive to throw away after a single applica-tion. The absorbent cotton answers the purpose admirably, and, as it is not costly, may be destroyed each time after using. The lotion is poured out into a saucer or small vessel, and the cotton moistened with it from time to time as it is being dabbed on. Another class of lotions or washes are those containing sediment. These are always to be thoroughly shaken before pour-ing out into a vessel. In applying, the ab-sorbent cotton or a piece of soft linen may be used. A sponge would be unsuitable, as the sediment, instead of being deposited upon the skin, would disappear in the meshes of the sponge. These washes are sometimes used for chafing beneath the mammary gland in monthly nursing, and also in some of the eruptive diseases. The wash dries and the sediment remains as a protective coating to the parts.

"Another class of applications that are "Another class of applications that are often demanded in such diseases as scarlet fever, measles, etc., are ointments. In the last stage, or scaling stage, of searlet fever, for instance, ointments or oily applications are almost invariably used. They are soothing and grateful to the skin, and prevent or limit the contagion. An ointment should be smooth, nomogeneous and free from lumps. The former, if applied to the sensitive skin, will often prove irritating, while the latter will prove soothing and peffeshing. Oint-ments, when applied for soothing or healing purposes, as, for instance, in the after treatment of blisters, should be applied upon pieces of lint, spreading about the thickness of the back of a table-knife. The ointment should always be spread sufficientthick to prevent drying out and sticking to the parts, or else on removal pain and damage are caused, the condition which it has been your aim to prevent. For spreading an ointment an ordinary knife or a spatula is employed. Where large or irreg-ular surfaces are to be thus treated, as in erysipelas or similar diseases, the pieces of lint upon which the ointment is spread should be small, so that they may fit close ly upon the parts. A single large piece will wrinkle, and some part will be too much pressed and acted upon, and others will escape entirely. For oiling or greasing purposes, as in scarlet fever, the ointment is poses, as in scarley lever, the children usually smeared or gently rubbed over the skin. For this purpose the hand may be used, or, which is preferable, a soft piece of

THE FORCE OF HABIT.

How It Almost Led to the Loss of a $200,000 Package.
"Not long ago," said an express agent of the United States Express Company, to a St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter, "I had an instance of the effects of long-continued habit brought to my attention in a most forcible and disagreeable manner. My run at that time was between Indianapolis and St. Louis, and I took the express and money packages from the Eastern agent at the former city. I had thoroughly systematized my work, especially in regard to the money packages, which I always placed in one par-ticular spot before putting them into the safe. The agent always brought them to my car, when I receipted for them, and then I would walk about the platform for a few minutes before the train started. On the occasion to which I refer the Eastern train was rather late, the agent had some business to transact with the station-master, and sent me word to come on the platform to receive my money, he sending the other packages to my car. I went over to him and he handed me a canvas bag, which he told me contained over $200,000, the largest amount he had ever had. He explained that he had not sent the porter with this on account of its value. I set it down on a baraccount of its value. I set it down on a par-rel, signed the book and then walked to my car to take a look at it. The porter had placed a traveling-bag in the place I re-served for my money, and seeing it occu-pied I thought every thing was in order, and strolled about the depot until the train started. Just as we were pulling out an Irishmen came running up and threat the Irishman came running up and threw the bag containing the $200,000 into my car. glanced at it and very nearly fainted. I had glanced at it and very hearly fainted. I had become so accustomed to having nothing to do when I was on the platform, that I had entirely forgotten the money, although my attention had been particularly directed to it, and had left it lying where any one of one hundred people could have picked it up and walked off with it. Since that time I have let nothing whatever interfere with my regular routine."

An Incident Illustrating the Peculiar Mental Condition of Invalids. The imagination, and more especially the credulity of man, says the "Topical Talker" of the Pittsburgh Disputch, ofter a tempting field for the quack and the dishonest man of medicine. It seems that when a man's physical strength is sapped or some directions in the shape of disease threatens it. enemy in the shape of disease threatens it the capacity of his taith is enlarged and the tentacles of his imagination are multiplied.

tentacles of his imagination are multiplied. He will believe any thing a doctor tells him, and clutch at any straw hope holds out.

A few days ago as I entered the office of one of the most upright and learned of Pittsburgh's surgeons, I met a little man coming out. He was intensely angry; there was no disguising of that fact, and he was swearing at the physician whose office he was leaving at a great rate.

I asked the doctor what had happened.

I asked the doctor what had happened.
"Nothing extraordinary," he replied.
"That man has a cancer and wanted me to

"Wouldn't you do it?"
"Yes, under certain or "Yes, under certain conditions. In the first place I offended him by saying that I was intensely sorry for him, but I couldn't take his case. He asked me why, and I said I would rather not answer. But he insisted, saying that he had come two hundred miles to see me and wanted my chine, who takes

"Now here is Dr.—who was attending Mr.—up to the time of his death, and if he treated him for one thing he treated him for a dozen different disorders. First the doctor said pneumonia was the trouble; then it was consumption. Then the patient was dosed for heart'trouble, and so on until just before he died it was ascertained that disease of the kidneys was the real trouble, and that which had been at first treated as pneumonia, consumption, heart disease, etc., were but the symptoms of kidney disease.

"But then it was too late.

"This is only one case in a hundred, and I am beginning to lose faith in the doctors altogether. In fact I haven't had any need for their services since I began to keep Warner's Safe Cure in my house, a little over three years ago. Whenever I feel a little out of sorts I take a few doses of it, confident that the source of all disease is in the kidneys, which I know ease is in the kidneys, which I know Warner's Safe Cure will keep in good order, and will eradicate any disease that may be lurking there. Had Mr.—followed a similar course, I have no doubt that he would be alive to-day; but of course all people don't think alike.

"One thing is certain, however, and that is the doctors are allowed a little too much freedom in the way they have of pretending to know that the thing the state of the state that which they really know nothing about. An Expression of Delight. "About a week ago," says a Los Angeles, Cal., druggist, "a Chinaman came in with a tame shoulder. I sold him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and guaranteed that it would cure him. He came in again last night, and as soon as he got inside the dcor began to swing, his arms over his head like an Indian club swinger. I thought the blamed fool had a fit, but he finally stopped long enough to say: "Medicine veily fine, veily fine; alle same make me feel pienty good." Chamberlain's Pain Balm is without an equal for sprains, rheumatism, an equal for sprains, rheumatism, aches, pains or lame back. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

There won't be beds enough in New York next week.

In Three Days. Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism, but it can be done, if the proper treatment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert of New Brunswick, Ills.: "I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in the badly afficted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It cured me in three days. I am all right to-day; and I would urge on everyone who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once," For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.
